Derwentwater, or, as it was anciently known, Keswick Lake, is one of the most popular and beautiful of the English lakes. It is about three miles long and a mile and a half wide. Skiddaw (3,058 feet) overlooks its northern shores. Lodore Glen is situated to the south of the lake, and is a picturesque and romantic gorge through which flows a small stream, whose course over its rugged bed was the inspiration for Southey's famous poem.
